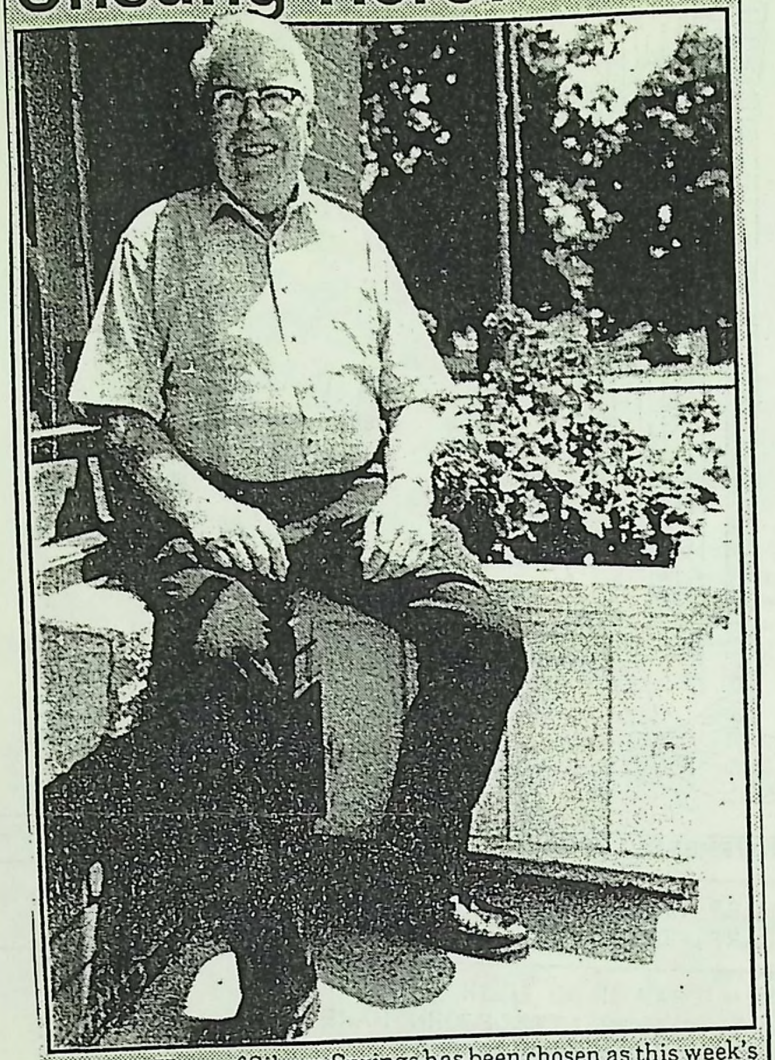
"HAPPY HUNTING"

Unsung Hero:



Gene Harp of Siloam Springs has been chosen as this week's "Unsung Hero" after Gaye Bland nominated him for his many community activities.

"Gene's first love is antique tool collecting, and he takes his tools and does demonstrations in schools not only in Siloam Springs but in other communities as well. He has brought his tools to the (Siloam Springs) museum several times during our children's program in the summer, and given youngsters the opportunity to not only see but also use the tools their great-grandfathers would have used.

"Gene is on the board of the museum... [and has been] active in support of the museum from the early 1970s. He recently played blacksmith at our Pioneer Crafts Day, and is on our long-range planning committee...

"He has always been willing to volunteer his time to building projects for us...Gene also helped Main Street by building several flower boxes for downtown last spring."

Harp and his wife, Virginia, have lived in Siloam Springs for nearly 30 years.

(Editor's Note: For her nomination, Bland has requested that $10 be contributed by the News Leader to the Siloam Springs Public Library. If you know someone who should be nominated for "Unsung Hero," send a letter to the News Leader, P.O. Box 1044, Siloam Springs 72761, and we will contribute $10 to a charity or organization of your choice.)

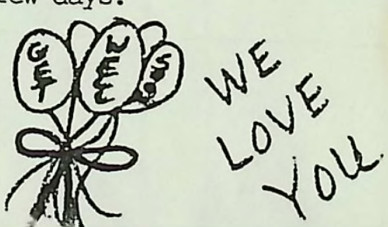
CONGRATULATIONS!

GET WELL SOON!

One of our members, T.J. Harp is recovering nicely from surgery in the P&S Hospital here in Shreveport, La. He was very sick, but with excellent doctors and all of our prayers T.J. hopes to go home in a few days.



Some religious influence rubbed off on the Harpes. They spurced up their appearance to avoid detection and passed themselves off as Methodist preachers at the home of James Tompkins on Deer Creek, south of Henderson. Despite being armed, the Harpes drew no suspicion from Tompkins. Big Harpe said a long grace at the supper table. Making conversation, the Harpes asked their host about his store of venison. Tompkins replied that his supply was short, as he had been out of powder for some time. Big Harpe generously poured a cup of powder from his horn and gave it to Tompkins.

The same powder would a few days later contribute to the outlaw's demise on a hot August day.

A good meal must have aroused their appetite for violence, for the Harpes headed for Squire Silas McBee's house to do him in. McBee had been very active in pursuing the brothers, and they were bent on his destruction. When they arrived, McBee's hunting dogs foiled the Harpes' scheme and chased them away.

Leaving the McBee residence, the Harpes proceeded to Moses Stegall's home, four miles away. At the house were Mrs. Stegall, her infant son and Major William Love, a surveyor who had come to see her husband on business. Evidence points to the Stegalls' and the Harpes' having been acquainted from previous meetings in Tennessee.

The Harpes split Love's skull with an axe while the three men were sharing sleeping quarters in the loft; as Mrs. Stegall prepared breakfast the Harpes rocked her crying baby in the corner of the room; when the morning meal was prepared, she remarked that the infant was awfully quiet; the reason was obvious when the mother looked into the cradle—its throat had been cut from ear to ear. Hysterical women always irritated the Harpes, and they put the mother to death. They ate the breakfast she had prepared, set fire to the house and rode away.

After killing two more men as they fled from the Stegall house, the Harpes collected their women and children, and that same afternoon they began making their escape.

News of the five murders in a single day spread rapidly. Stegall, McBee, Tompkins and others immediately began gathering a volunteer posse. They split up, some proceeding on horseback and others on foot. McBee spotted Big Harpe on a distant hill, and the posse trailed the out-laws to their camp. There they questioned the women, who told them the direction the two men had taken.

John Leiper had a clear shot at Big Harpe, but was unable to fire his gun. Leiper then exchanged guns with Tompkins and took off in hot pursuit of the outlaw. Being in advance of the rest of the posse, Leiper took unerring aim and fired. With the powder Big Harpe had so generously given Tompkins earlier, he inflicted a mortal wound. The remainder of the posse rode up, and the rapidly weakening Micajah Harpe was pulled to the ground.

Harpe asked for water. Leiper took off one of the outlaw's shoes, filled it with water and gave him a drink. McBee told Harpe that he was dying, but they would hasten his death and give him no time to prepare himself for another world. Big Harpe made no reply. Stegall stepped forward, pressed his gun to Harpe's left side and pulled the trigger. The wounded man expired almost instantly. Big Harpe's head was then severed from his body.

Meanwhile, Little Harpe had escaped, only to die a violent death later in Mississippi. The women and children were rounded up and taken back to Henderson. Later the three women would stand trial at Russellville on the charge of being parties to the Stegall murders, but, once again, they were found not guilty.

Micajah Harpe's body was left in the wilds of Muhlenburg County as unsepulchered as his passing was unmourned.

This concludes our story of "THE HORRIBLE HARPES." Now is there anyone who wants to come forward and tell us of their relation to these guys?

EMANUEL M. HARP

Mrs. Evelyn Lawrence (Professional name) is a talented story teller and related the romantic story of her great-grandfather and great-grandmother Harp who started the Harp settlement out Number Nine Highway in Malvern, Arkansas.

Emanuel M. Harp was born 17 February 1807 in Henry County, Georgia, son of William Cullen Harp and Elizabeth Russian. He met and fell in love with Margaret Ison, daughter of Colonel Frank Ison. She had been raised in the life of luxury of the "Old South" and they did not approve of him as a fiance so they eloped sometime prior tothe Civil War. Because of their opposition of her marriage she never again went home to visit her parents.

Emanuel Harp heard of a wagon being fitted to go to the wilderness so he and his wife decided to join them. They got ready and followed the train but when they reached the Mississippi River they couldn't bring their cooking stove across because it was so heavy and so they had to leave it on the river bank.

When they reached here they camped around some springs and she was cooking for her family when the came running up and wanted her to come see what he had found. She hated to leave her meal but accompanied him, since he couldn't wait. He had found a place just like her home. They walked up there and she said, "look atthe cedar trees." They stayed there and raised 11 children. First he acquired 300 acres and increased it until he had 700 acres. They settled there in 1835.

It was in 1862 that Mr. Harp gave three acres for a cemetery. The deed said for family and their descendants, for love and devotion, now and forever. Now at the entrance to the cemetery is an archway with this inscription: "HARP MEMORIAL" October 1854, donated by Emanuel Harp in 1862.

After the battle of Jenkins Ferry, a young soldier, weary, hungry, filthy and his feet tied in gunny sacks went toward Rockport, It was so dark as he wandered along, he finally saw a light. He went up to the house and it was the Harp's. Mr. Harp answered the door and invited him in. He said he couldn't come in in that shape, but again Mr. Harp welcomed him in, told him where to bathe, fed him and made him feel at home. He must have succeeded for he stayed on and finally married a daughter, Sarah. Their grand-daughter, Mrs. Lawrence, has a copy of his Confederate record relative to his Confederate War Service. It shows that he was a member of Co. C. 6th. Regiment Ala. Calvary, that he served from 9 April 1864 to 8 May 1865.

Another intersting romance was that of W. C. Harp who is buried inside the iron fence and the graves are cemented over in a square. He was born 23 August 1872 and died 2 September 1945. He went to Alaska during the gold rush, met, fell in love with, and married a French girl dancer. He had to be away from home on his mining trips and one time while he was gone the milk man found her in her home murdered. She was buried at Harp's Cemetery and for years he put fresh flowers on her grave under a glass top. Now that is covered over with concrete and the glass is gone but she has the largest monument in the cemetery.

Eugenie Harp
Wife of W. C. Harp
Born 24 August 1880 Bretterans, France
Died 7 April 1915 Fairbanks, Alaska - Age 34

The spring is still there on the other side of the cemetery away from Malvern, and the home site the other side of it. No original buildings are left standing that we know of.
*Editors Note: My family and I have visited Malvern, Arkansas several times and met all the Harp folks still living here. They are all so friendly and nice. A little section of Malvern near where the cemetery is is called Harp Community. If you should every be near Malvern it is quite interesting. Look up some of the Harp's and I promise you will be welcomed. Fran.

THE DOMESDAY BOOK

In 1086 William the Conqueror launched the great Domesday Survey of England to ascertain the extent and value of his newly acquired lands. In accordance with his plan, commissioners were dispatched to every county in the realm to discover the names of landowners and their tenants as well as the names of those who owned the land in the time of Edward the Confessor (d.1066), the extent of the cultivated territory, and the total value of land, plows, and livestock. Translated from Latin to English by Dr. John Morris.

OUR QUAKER ANCESTORS - The work begins with a short but essential history of the Quaker movement & a discussion of its organization & structure, particularly as it affects genealogical research. Later chapters describe Quaker migrations to & within America, the special types of records available for research, & the Berrys' very own methods for locatin & using those records. In addition, there are chapters on record repositories & libraries with Quaker source material, non-Quaker repositories, & Quaker sources & repositories outside the U.S., together with a bibliography, maps of selected meeting locations, & a glossary of terms peculiar to the Society of Friends.
